The patronizing assumption and manner of the Nixon pretensions to purity got under the skin of one columnist. In his San Francisco Chronicle column of November 29, 1973, Charles McCabe described this as self-satire and added, "Mr. Nixon talks about telling the truth as if it were some child's game that he is constantly and patiently explaining to us dumkopfs out here in the wasteland."